

Course Objectives of Geography (CCF)

Course Code: GEOG-MD-CC02-Th/P

Course Title: Human Geography

- Students will understand the elements of human geography.
- Students will be able to describe evolution of human societies such as hunting and food gathering, pastoral nomadism, subsistence farming and industrial society.
- Students will learn about human adaptation to the environment.
- Students will develop a solid understanding of the concept of demographic transition and distribution, density, growth of population in India.
- Students will understand the concept of urban and rural settlement.
- Students will also understand the concept of size-class classification of urban settlements after census of India.

Course Code: GEOG-MD-CC03-Th/P

Course Title: Economic Geography

- This course offers an introduction to the ways in which economic activities are organized over the earth surface.
- Students will be able to know primary, secondary, tertiary, quaternary and quinary activities.
- Students will understand the concept of location of economic activities such as theories of Von Thunen and Weber.
- The course explores the concept and processes of economic globalization, international trade and economic blocs.

Course Code: GEOG-MD-CC04-Th/P

Course Title: Geomorphology

- Students will be exposed to the nature of degradation process such as mass wasting.
- The course explores the processes of different geomorphic agents.
- Students will understand the concept of folds and faults, their classification and surface expressions.
- Students will develop a solid understanding of the concept of river network on granites, basalts and limestone.
- Students will be able to describe the models of landscape evolution view of Davis, Penck, King and Hack.
- Students will understand the concept of system approach and role of humans in landform development.